Appomattox Asks Top Priority For Construction Grant For New Wastewater Treatment Facility

Ronnie Spiggle, member of the Appomattox Town Council, and W. S. Slagle, Town Manager, had the honor of being the first-ever participants in the new citizens hour program before the State Water Control Board in Richmond on Monday of this week.

In the 12-minute presentation, Slagle, a former employee of the State Water Control Board, pointed out how the Town of Appomattox had in the past moved to solve its own waste water treatment problems thereby reducing its eligibility for State and Federal funding. On the other hand those jurisdictions that had not moved to solve their own problems and in some instances who had successfully defied the state regulating agencies were first in line aorund 1970 to receive 75-80% grant money.

It was further pointed out that these modern wastewater treatment plants are great stimuli for business and industrial growth.

Appomattox, on the other hand, is stuck with two outmoded treatment plants. In addition, it was pointed out that the priority rating system as now devised is descriminatory against small communities which are beginning to grow rapidly because the priority system helps to reinforce the present growth pattern of the large jurisdictions.

Slagle also pointed out that small communities do not qualify for "Community Development Type Block Grants" to the extent that metropolitan area do, however, he did commend the Board for their support of the legislation making available supplemental grants in cases of extraordinary hardship. This is important because the economy of scale factor and high operating cost may push the cost of new wastewater treatment facilities, even with the conventional grant, beyond the ability to pay in certain communities.

Slagle further pointed out that well-planned wastewater treatment facilities are an integral part of the orderly development of the Appomattox Community and as such constitute a cornerstone of the total structure of local governmental services.

He expresses a desire to work as an equal partner with the state regulating agencies and not as an unwilling partner.

In response to Board questions, Slagle pointed out that under revised criteria that one of our sewage treatment plants is overloaded and the other is approaching capacity. Also in response to question Slagle pointed out that the proposed sewage treatment plant was located through local plans and confirmed by the Comprehensive Water Quality Management Plan of Central Virginia.

The Board was very appreciative of and commended the Town of Appomattox for its constructive and cooperative attitude in meeting its responsibilities to the Appomattox community.

Community "Good Friday" Planned

A special worship service will be held Friday from 12:10 until 12:50 p.m. It will focus on the death of Jesus, but it will offer a new view.

The Appomattox Community is invited to worship this Friday at Court House Presbyterian Church. Four local denominations are cooperating for this Good Friday service: Liberty Baptist, Memorial United Methodist, St. Anne's Episcopal, and Court House Presbyterian.

"For a full appreciation of Easter," says the Rev. Henry E. Riley, Jr., "we must experience Good Friday. And that is often difficult for us."

The four churches are conducting twenty minute noonday services, Monday through Thursday this week. Following each of these worship times, a free luncheon is provided those attending.

"Our service on Friday is special," says the Rev. T. Moray Peoples, Jr. "To experience something of the meaning and feeling of the Crucifixion we will use a recording of Mozart's "Requiem" and use slides depicting the Passion story," Rev. Peoples went on to explain that this will replace the "ordinary sermon."

There is no luncheon on Friday. The ministers urge everyone to consider eating no lunch this day. They are asking that the cost of lunches be contributed to the community offering to relieve hunger. The total offering for the week will be divided equally among the four churches to forward to their denomination's effort toward erasing starvation.

The four ministers have called the community's attention to hunger in the world, the United States and Virginia. The Rev. H. Doyle Chauncey spoke clearly, "I believe the death of Jesus Christ shows forth the hunger of mankind for God's salvation. It is no game, it is a matter of life and death."

Easter Sunday morning the Appomattox community is invited to celebrate at a Sunrise Service at 6:30 a.m. Rev. Chauncey will preach at Liberty Baptist Church and a breakfast, at no charge, will be available to worshippers after the service.

The Rev. Cecil V. Dalton and his congregation at Court House Presbyterian are grand hosts. The community is thankful to them for sharing their sanctuary and fellowship room.

"New Virginians" To Perform April 5th

Whatever your taste in musical entertainment . . . from jazz-rock and lively show tunes to the traditional favorites . . . Virginia Tech's NEW VIRGINIANS are just what you've been waiting to hear.

The 32-voice choral group and its 10-member stage band, about as untraditional a college choral group as you'll find anywhere, will appear in concert here April 5, sponsored by the Appomattox Lions Club.

And when the song-happy youngsters led by director Stan Kingma scramble onto the stage at the Appomattox County High School, you'll know from the moment you see them that something is happening that few college groups ever even dream about.

The NEW VIRGINIANS are the 1974-75 version of what for the past two years has stormed Virginia with its new concert format.

Not many people will fail to notice the colorful showtime costumes and well-scrubbed look of the collegiate singers. It all helps set the mood for the extraordinary music.

Just what kind of music the NEW VIRGINIANS will focus upon at the concert will depend largely on what the audience wants to hear. Each of the group's shows is keyed precisely to the audience at hand.

"It's like conversation, in a way," Kingma says, "we speak to the audience with music, and decide by its reaction what song or sequence we'll sing next."

Not even the soloists know when they will sing. About a dozen of the male and female singers are regulars in the glare of the solo spotlight. But every youngster on the stage is prepared, for the singers never know when Kingma will bring one of them out to sing alone.

The musical precision and stage presence of these singing collegiates didn't all just happen. The format has been developing since Kingma quit being a mechanical engineer ten years ago and began the Virginia Tech Glee Club.

Hundreds of concerts . . . some of them on national television or before national

National Park Seeks Entries For Art Show

A great moment in the history of our nation occurred here at Appomattox on April 9, 1865 when Generals Lee and Grant met to decide on a peace between the United States Army and the Army of Northern Virginia. What is the importance of this peace to you as an individual?

You may illustrate this importance by entering the art show to be held at the historical park on Sunday, April 6, 1975. The show will concentrate basically on drawings and paintings using oils, watercolors, crayons, finger paints, pen and ink, pencil, charcoal, colored pencils and colored pens. Use of cutouts and paste is also permissible. Drawings may be captioned or worded as necessary.

There is no minimum entry size but no entry can be larger than 14" x 20" and all should be on poster board, canvas, or equivalent material which will stand up to light wind and handling.

Adult entries have a deadline set at 4:30 p.m. on Friday, April 4th, at the park's office. For further information, call 352-8987.
